US contact recall

OVER half a million contact lenses are being recalled by CooperVision in the US.

The recall relates to the company's Avaira Toric contact lenses, which have been found to cause pain, red eye and blurred vision.

Australian R&D tops $1 billion

THE latest figures from the annual Australian Bureau of Statistics business expenditure report on research and development show that the Australian medicines industry's R&D investment exceeded $1 billion for the 2009-10 period.

The figures mark the second successive year that Aussie medicines R&D has hit the magic $1 billion mark, with the industry's investment coming in as the third largest by area of business expenditure.

"These figures confirm Australia's reputation as a global centre for R&D excellence," said Medicines Australia CEO Dr Brendan Shaw.

"This is a strong performance and we can consolidate it if we continue to take steps towards maintaining Australia's global competitiveness as a destination for R&D investment.

"The R&D tax credit is one policy setting that will boost investment in Australian R&D," he added.

Vietnam to welcome Aussie pharmacists

A VERY lucky group of Australian pharmacists and their partners will be jetsetting off into the sunset on a well earned break at the end of this month, thanks to Symbion.

The group are the winners of Symbion's 2011 Pharmacy Choice Incentive Program, which rewards participants with points for compliance in business areas including marketing, training, store layout and operations.

This year more than 300 pharmacists participated in the incentive program, which ran from May to August, with the top 11 achievers winning a trip to Vietnam, and pharmacists ranked in the top 30 heading to Uluru for the weekend.

"This year's incentive was extremely successful with those taking part displaying average growth of more than 8 percent, in what has been a challenging environment," said Pharmacy Choice's Richard Manthey.

Sustained weight loss

WEIGHT loss is sustainable over the long term, as long as several lifestyle factors are in play, according to a new US study.

The study looked at survey results from 3,000 people who had lost 13.5kgs or more and who had maintained the weight loss for more than one year.

Amongst the findings researchers discovered that dieters who kept their weight off long term were more likely to track their food intake, kilojoule or fat count; follow a low kilojoule/low fat diet; eat breakfast regularly; limit food intake; not go overboard with treats on holidays; walk or exercise an hour a day; weigh themselves regularly and watch less than 10 hours of TV per week.

EMA appointment

THE European Medicines Agency's Management Board has appointed Guido Rasi as its new Executive Director, effective 16 November.

Meanwhile the EMA's Management Board also endorsed the Agency's implementation plan for its Road map to 2015 (PD 02 Feb).

The road map and its implementation plan are designed to optimise the EMA's performance in three areas including: addressing public-health needs, facilitating access to medicines and optimising the safe and rational use of medicines.

Following the recent approval, and in light of the current economic climate, the road map is now set to be implemented gradually through annual work programs up to 2015.

Aussies support vaccination

NINETY-four percent of Australians are in favour of vaccination, according to a recent Newspoll survey, however amongst many, misconceptions still remain. The survey looked at responses

2012 flu vaccine

NEXT year the components of the flu vaccine should contain: A (H1N1), an A/California/7/2009 (H1N1) - like strain, 15 µg HA per dose; A (H3N2): an A/Perth/16/2009 (H3N2) - like strain, 15 µg HA per dose and B: a B/Brisbane/60/2008 - like strain, 15 µg HA per dose, as recommended by the Australian Influenza Vaccine Committee.

The composition is based on the September WHO recommendations.

ASMI presentations

PRESENTATIONS from the recent ASMI and Complementary Healthcare Council seminar on the new pharmacovigilance requirements for OTC and CM sponsors are now available to view online for ASMI members - see www.asmi.com.au.

from 1,200 Aussies aged over 18 years and found that whilst the overwhelming majority supported vaccination, a staggering one in four believed that natural homeopathic remedies are an effective alternative to conventional vaccines, despite there being no research to support this claim.

"Vaccines are the single biggest public health advance of the 20th century," said Professor Robert Booy, head of clinical research at the National Centre for Immunisation Research and Surveillance.

"While it's heartening to see Australians understand the importance of vaccines in preventing diseases spread, the number of misconceptions out there is worrying.

"Australians are clearly confused about this issue," he added.

Other interesting trends turned up by researchers included the fact that 15% of Australians believe that vaccines weaken the immune system, and 7% believe that children do not need to be vaccinated because the baby's immune system is adequately developed through the placenta and breast feeding.

DISPENSARY CORNER

YOU'LL never get fit riding the bus.

The third place winner of the Kielder Marathon in North East England suffered an embarrassing blow this month, after authorities stripped him of his medal for catching the bus.

According to reports, Rob Sloan originally took third place after finishing the grueling marathon in just two hours and fifty-one minutes.

His victory however began to sour when fellow runners raised questions as to his whereabouts during portions of the race.

Initially Sloan vigorously defended his honour calling the allegations "laughable".

When he heard there was to be an investigation he told organisers that he got on a bus at the 32km mark, because he "felt tired".

Sloan managed to get dropped off near a wooded area close to the finish line.

Witnesses say they observed him hiding behind a tree and watching as the first and second place runners crossed the line, then emerged to run across in third place.

PHARMACIES may need to order coat racks to stock this.

An inventive NZ designer has created the world's first breathalyser jacket, which lets wearers know when they have had too much alcohol.

The jacket contains a nozzle in its collar which wearers can blow into, and which then carries the air to a sensor in the jacket's pocket for breath/alcohol analysis.

From here, the results are sent to lights stitched into the jacket's forearm which get brighter depending on how much alcohol there is in the wearers system.

The lights only glow for about a minute.
