$90,000 hit per pharmacy

PHARMACIES will have no choice but to reduce staff in order to survive if the government does not address the impact of price disclosure, according to an analysis by the Pharmacy Guild's National Director of Health Economics, Stephen Armstrong.

Writing in a special edition of the Guild's Forefront newsletter yesterday, Armstrong said that the regime is set to take $90,000 off the bottom line of the average community pharmacy in 2014-15.

"Any business, large or small, needs to maintain profits at levels required to meet financial commitments," he said.

"To survive through 2014, unless there is appropriate government intervention, owners will have little alternative but to shed jobs," Armstrong added.

The comments were based on a conservative analysis of just 35 drugs - not including any injectables or combination medications.

Valeant absorbs B+L

VALEANT Pharmaceuticals International has settled the acquisition of eye care group Bausch + Lomb, completing the deal announced in May (PD May 28).

Valeant already has a focus on eye health as well as dermatology, neurology and branded generics.

The situation is potentially even worse, with the PBS price reductions also hitting community pharmacies in terms of reduced generic trading terms - which have been "the only thing filling the gap caused by a 10% real reduction in remuneration per prescription over recent years," Armstrong said.

The special Forefront also includes commentary on the issue from Guild President Kos Sclavos and PSA National President Grant Kardachi, with the peak bodies uniting to address the crisis (PD yesterday).

They have encouraged every stakeholder to act now and contact political candidates, with Sclavos saying "we must act to avert this crisis for pharmacy".

He said it's worth reminding the politicians that there will be about 30 million pharmacy visits during the election campaign - or about 200,000 per Federal electorate.

THE world's first online clinical portal offering support for men with prostate cancer was officially announced yesterday at the World Prostate Cancer Congress in Melbourne.

Healthcare professionals attending the congress have been invited to enrol patients in the pilot program, dubbed PROSTMATE, which also includes the opportunity to schedule live e-consultations with specialists, to improve the care of patients in regional areas or with mobility issues.

The website provides a private portal where patients can track their progress before and after treatment, and will launch to the general public in Oct.

FDA OK for Adempas

BAYER'S Adempas (riociguat), a novel treatment for pulmonary arterial hypertension, has been given strong support from an FDA expert panel which voted unanimously to recommend approval of the therapy.

Adempas is not approved by the TGA in Australia at this stage.

Complaints research study

INDIVIDUALS and organisations who have had a complaint or notification against a pharmacist are being invited to participate in an independent University of Sydney study on Community expectations and experiences of health complaints and notifications processes.

The Pharmacy Board of Australia says it's supporting the project "because it is part of a series of studies that will help improve the management of complaints and notifications in the future".

The research will involve six professions: pharmacists, nurses, midwives, dentists, psychologists and doctors, covering situations where the complaint or notification is closed in the period 01 Jul 2013 to 30 Jun 2014, and where the issues were managed by the AHPRA, a National Board, the NSW Health care Complaints Commission or a NSW Health Professional Council.

The survey is anonymous and complainants will automatically be sent a letter in the month after their complaint or notification is closed.

The study is being led by Suzanne Pierce, and questions about the project can be directed to her at spie2144@uni.sydney.edu.au.

TGA CM cancellations

THE Therapeutic Goods Administration has cancelled two items from the Australian Register of Therapeutic Goods after a compliance review.

The cancellations include Zenacor from Pharmabrand Labs, due to insufficient evidence to support the indications for the product, and ATP Life's Coffee Shape slimming green coffee, due to the sponsor failing to provide info about the product.

Copaxone MS delay?

EARLY treatment with Copaxone (glatiramer acetate) in patients with Clinically Isolated Syndrome and lesions suggestive of multiple sclerosis may delay the diagnosis of clinically definite multiple sclerosis (CDMS) by more than two-and-a-half years compared to later treatment, new research reveals.

Associate Professor John King, Chairman of Royal Melbourne Hospital Neuroscience Foundation said that the results reinforce the existing weight of data supporting the efficacy of Copaxone in reducing relapses.

DISPENSARY CORNER

A FRENCH woman has caused a storm of media interest after she posted an online advertisement offering to breast-feed the babies of homosexual male couples.

The Paris-based lady said in the ad that she is "a young mother in perfect health, a trained nurse of 29, and I am renting my breasts to milk-feed infants".

She wants to charge 100 euros a day, and promises up to ten breast-feeds as required daily.

When news agency Reuters contacted the woman, she said there had been a strong response to the advertisement.

"I've received more than a dozen requests, but only half of them were serious," she said.

"The rest were from perverts".
