Wockhardt MHRA ban

THE UK Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency has withdrawn a good manufacturing practice certificate covering the Chikalthana, India facility operated by Wockhardt, meaning drugs made there cannot be exported to Britain.

ASMI responds on Vitamin D

THE Australian Self-Medication Industry says a University of Auckland meta-analysis of the effect of vitamin D supplements on bone mineral density should not discourage Australians from taking a preventative approach to osteoporosis.

The study, published in The Lancet this month, found that there were no benefits from taking vitamin D in healthy adults, with lead author Ian Reid saying "our data suggest that the targeting of low-dose vitamin D supplements only to individuals who are likely to be deficient could free up substantial resources that could be better used elsewhere in healthcare."

However ASMI has urged caution in interpreting the results, highlighting variation in sample sizes and the wide range of daily vitamin D doses that were investigated in the meta-analysis.

ASMI regulatory and scientific affairs director, Steve Scarff, said "what we don't want to see is people, now and in the future, cutting vitamin D out of their supplement routine and potentially making themselves vulnerable to future fractures."

TWC urges pharmacy rebates

TERRY White Chemists founder and chairman Terry White yesterday urged new federal health minister Peter Dutton to broaden the Medicare provider base to allow rebates to be claimed for in-pharmacy professional

"Terry White Chemists is on a trajectory that will lead community pharmacy into an expanded patient focused model with huge professionally rewarding opportunities," he said.

"At TWC we have refocused our attention on what it is that people expect from their local pharmacist in terms of care, attention and trust," White added, saying that the group had weathered the attack on pharmacy by supermarket giants and "warehouse-style" pharmacies.

"Some pharmacies have moved dangerously close to becoming two-dollar shops... these pharmacies will miss the opportunity to play an increased role in preventative health care and health management," White added.

Dutton, who also addressed the Terry White Chemists conference, was told that pharmacists look forward to working closely with him to assist in one of the government's most challenging areas.

White urged the minister to "act in the interests of the health of the nation to preserve access to freely available pharmacy advice and to support advanced community pharmacy health services.

"The Medicare provider base includes a range of allied health professionals and it makes sense to include pharmacists in that, particularly given identified trends towards the convenience and value that pharmacy offers," he said.

Aussies missing the beat

A NEW survey released today has demonstrated that while 90% of Australians know if their blood pressure is high, only 42% know what their heart rate is, or if it is regular or not.

An irregular heart rate or heart arrhythmia is commonly a sign of atrial fibrillation (AF), a major risk factor for stroke.

The survey of >1,000 Australians which was sponsored by Bristol-Myers Squibb (BMS) and Pfizer also showed that 1 in 4 identify stroke as a major health concern alongside cancer and diabetes, but 34% did not know it could be prevented, and 48% do not know how stroke occurs.

At the same time, almost 60% had not hear of AF even though it affects an estimated 500,000 Australians and of the 45,000 firstever strokes each year, a third have AF to blame.

Atrial Fibrillation Association founder and ceo, Trudie Lobband, encourages Australians to know their heart rate and regularly check their pulse to monitor for changes.

"The survey shows a significant lack of awareness about heart health and how it applies to stroke prevention," Lobband said.

"We were quite surprised to find that more than a third of those

New AusPARs

THE Therapeutic Goods Administration has published new Australian Public Assessment Reports covering the assessment process for Sanofi-Aventis Australia's Lyxumia (lixisenatide), Novartis Pharmaeuticals' Afinitor (everolimus), Mundipharma's Folotyn (pralatrexate) and Celgene's Vidaza (azacitidine).

surveyed did not know if their heart rate was 'normal".

The survey coincided with a visit to Australia by Michael Ezekowitz, Professor of Medicine at Thomas Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia and Director of AF Research at the Cardiovascular Research Foundation NY.

In a series of presentations and webinars to health care professionals, Ezekowitz said that the advent of novel anticoagulants (NOACs) mean that millions of patients worldwide with AF will benefit from "significant stroke reduction".

August saw the first PBS listing of the NOACs with the once-aday Xarelto (rivaroxaban) (PD 17 Jul) followed in September by Eliquis (apixaban) and Pradaxa (dabigatran) (PD 13 Aug).

Professor Ezekowitz also outlined the pharmacist's role in counselling their AF patients whether they are on warfarin or a NOAC.

He emphasized that compliance is critical and that patients need to be educated about its importance and to take the therapy very seriously.

He recommended they wear a medical alert bracelet and be thoroughly schooled on how to use their medication.

RGH E-Bulletin

THIS week's edition of the Repatriation General Hospital Pharmacy E-Bulletin gives an overview of the relationship between drugs and food.

It cites a range of possible interactions such as altered rates of absorption, reduced or increased absorption, alteration of drug metabolism and enhanced tolerability of drugs.

DISPENSARY CORNER

WHAT'S this phobia called? A US man has developed a significant fear of flushing toilets, after he was seriously injured in a major bathroom explosion.

Michel Pierre required 30 stitches in his face, arms and legs after the toilet in his New York apartment exploded when he was checking the water pressure.

The 58-year-old was knocked temporarily unconscious by the blast, and has now rigged up a system so he can flush the dunny using a rope while he shelters behind the bathroom door.

He's seeking compensation from the building managers, with speculation the incident occurred due to a build-up of air pressure while the water was turned off for plumbing works.

His was one of three toilets in the building which exploded, but he was the only person injured.

A GROSSLY overweight British man who was forced to buy two seats on an aircraft because he needed the extra space was somewhat bemused when he found that the seats were two rows apart.

The 43 year-old weighs more than 230kg, and had to buy the extra ticket because of airline policy which dictates that anyone over 127kg (20 stone) must book an additional seat.

He was travelling to Ireland, and on the outbound flight he was embarrassed when he was allocated an aisle seat and a window seat, with another passenger seated in the middle.

And on the return trip "one seat was in row 17 and the other in row 19," he said.
