

Panadol win for GSK

RECKITT Benckiser has been banned from making claims that ibuprofen (Nurofen) provides faster and more effective relief from pain caused by common headaches than does paracetamol (Panadol), with a Federal Court judge yesterday saying RB had engaged in misleading or deceptive conduct.

The case, brought by Panadol maker GlaxoSmithKline, was in relation to 2015 advertisements based on a single clinical trial in 1996, with two other studies failing to replicate the findings.

Federal Court judge Lindsay Foster granted a permanent injunction and ordered RB to pay GSK's costs.

The court heard evidence that consumers bought OTC pain medications every two months, and that 33% of patients buy both paracetamol and ibuprofen based on different needs, new medical conditions or in-store displays.

Dispensary Corner

WHITE privilege - Lelux Hospital in Thailand is offering a skin whitening service - nothing unusual in that is there?

Err, in this case, the objects of whitening are the penis and the vagina - mmm.

Marketing manager Popol Tansakul said they had introduced vagina-whitening services four months ago but "Patients started to ask about penis-whitening, and so we started the treatment a month later".

Currently an average of 20-30 patients undergo treatment each month, some travelling from other countries for the 'privilege'.

Thailand's Public Health Ministry has issued warnings against the practice - and no pictures today.

Res-care meds simplified

WEBSTERCARE has announced changes to its RxMedChart process, claiming the new system can "reduce time spent on administration by doctors in NSW aged care facilities by 60%".

Webstercare md Gerard Stevens received notification late Dec from the NSW Ministry of Health that long awaited changes to the prescribing and dispensing of medications in NSW residential aged care facilities had been approved, removing the need for handwritten medication orders.

Prescribers can now simply sign and date a detailed printed Webstercare RxMedChart Order Sheet, reducing paperwork time dramatically and improving the accuracy of medication dispensing. Stevens said, "With the changes announced by the NSW Ministry of Health, the RxMedChart System will further help reduce the administrative workload of doctors working in aged care facilities freeing up more time for them to spend with patients."

Metropolitan Pharmacy Services pharmacy manager Danielle Martusciello added, "This decision means that the RxMedChart system can be used by the pharmacy, doctors and facility staff in the way it was originally designed.

"The changes to the residents' charts are much clearer and the administrative work for doctors and pharmacy staff is greatly reduced."
