APC confirms KAPS to be replaced

THE Australian Pharmacy Council (APC) has announced a significant overhaul of its assessment process for overseas pharmacists.

The Knowledge Assessment of Pharmaceutical Sciences (KAPS) exam will be replaced by the new Overseas Pharmacist Readiness Assessment (OPRA) exam (PD breaking news).

The change follows recommendations from a 2021 working group tasked with reviewing the KAPS exam.

The OPRA exam introduces key updates in the selection and scoring of questions, content areas, exam duration, and fees.

The final KAPS exam will be conducted in Nov 2024, with the OPRA exam debuting in Mar 2025.

APC CEO Bronwyn Clark highlighted that the OPRA exam will employ the Rasch model, a psychometric methodology used in other APC exams since 2020.

"This ensures our exam design remains robust and defensible, determining candidate ability effectively," said Clark.

"By adopting the Rasch methodology for the OPRA exam, we align our exam products and provide a shorter, more targeted assessment, as advised by contemporary exam design experts," she added.

The redesigned exam will have a stronger emphasis on therapeutics and practical knowledge application to match the evolving standards of pharmacy practice in Australia.

This adjustment aims to offer candidates a comprehensive assessment of their skills and knowledge, essential for beginning an internship and progressing toward registration.

RSM new leaders

RSM Australia has expanded its senior leadership team with 22 new appointments.

Chief Executive Partner Jamie O'Rourke highlighted that the appointments align with the firm's 13% staff growth since 2022, and its strategic focus on company growth.

Notably, 18 of the 22 appointments were internal promotions, underscoring RSM's commitment to "nurturing internal talent". Additionally, Research & Development Partner Jessica Olivier has been elected to the National Executive for a threeyear term.

The positions reflect RSM's commitment to increasing female representation in senior leadership.

The cost of the OPRA exam will be $2,190, while KAPS costs $2,290.

The APC has also commissioned a full-scale pilot for OPRA with their delivery partners to test all operating systems, with a new exam guide and sample paper.

Ramsay CEO shake-up

RAMSAY Health Care's longserving Managing Director and Group CEO, Craig McNally, will retire at the end of Jun 2025, the company confirmed on ASX.

The Ramsay Board has appointed Natalie Davis (pictured) as Group CEO-elect, starting 01 Oct, to work with McNally for an orderly transition before she becomes the company's Managing Director and Group CEO later this year.

Davis, formerly Managing Director for Woolworths Group's supermarket division, is recognised as a senior executive with extensive experience in driving large-scale strategic transformation.

Ramsay Chair David Thodey said, "in carefully weighing Ramsay's performance and strategy, the Board made a conscious decision to select a proven and dynamic leader who has successfully mastered large-scale business transformation during periods of uncertainty and market disruption".

Thodey praised Davis' business acumen and her ability to manage industry-wide changes.

"Natalie's strategic outlook and experience makes her exceptionally well-suited to progress Ramsay's strategy and skilfully accelerate our growth," Thodey commented.

Thodey also acknowledged McNally's significant contribution in "managing substantial change and building an experienced and resilient leadership team".

McNally will remain as Chair of Ramsay until Jun next year to support a smooth transfer of executive responsibilities.

Davis will immerse herself in Ramsay's operations and markets across Australia, Europe, and the UK during the transition period. JG

Race to end hepatitis by 2028

HEPATITIS NSW has committed to eliminating viral hepatitis by 2028, emphasising the need to distribute cures and vaccines effectively.

As World Hepatitis Day took place just last week, the spotlight is on Hep B and C as the most prevalent blood-borne illnesses in Australia, and the second leading cause of death from infectious diseases globally, stated the World Health Organization.

Hepatitis NSW CEO A/Prof

Steven Drew said, "we have a lot to celebrate - in a single generation, a life-threatening disease, Hepatitis C, has a cure".

"Starting treatment is easy and affordable, however, 25% of people with Hep C in NSW remain unaware they can be cured".

Reflecting on progress, Drew added, "we must reach diverse communities across the nation".

"Testing is easier, faster, and takes place in community settings - a game-changer."

The ELS Program in action

"Working with the Emergency Locum Service Program has been incredibly valuable for Myrtleford Discount Chemist. Whenever we've faced unexpected illness or family emergencies, the ELS Program has come through with locum pharmacists at very short notice, ensuring our operations run smoothly.

The booking process is straightforward and efficient, the responsiveness and reliability of the ELS Program team have been exceptional, providing us with peace of mind during critical times.

The ELS Program has truly made a difference for us, and I highly recommend their service to any pharmacy in need of reliable locum support in an emergency."

Dispensary Corner

AUSTRALIANS are a blearyeyed lot at the moment with many late nights spent watching our athletes at the Paris Olympic Games.

But for all the physical skill and prowess on display, a new study has looked into just how dangerous some of these sports actually are.

The results were compiled by comparing the number of athletes competing in each sport to the number of injuries to determine the risk factor.

According to Olympic injury data compiled since the 2008 Games in Beijing, BMX is far and away the most dangerous sport, even among the elite, with a 34.3% injury rate.

This percentage climbed even higher during the 2016 Olympic Games in Rio De Janeiro, with 37.5% of riders coming away a little worse for wear, even those with shiny new medals around their necks.

Perhaps unsurprisingly, next in the list was taekwondo with a 29.9% injury rate, followed by football, cycling and boxing.

At the other end of the scale, canoe slalom was found to be the safest of all sports, with only a 1.2% injury rate, followed by canoeing, shooting, rowing, archery, swimming, and believe it or not, equestrian.
