

Tweens skin range

AN organic skincare range has been created for 5 - 12 year olds.

Believed to be a world-first for pre-teens, Essential Angel was developed by a Victorian stay-at-home mum when she realised there were no suitable products that were pure enough for her young daughters' skin.

"This is not about growing up too fast... This is about developing healthy, life-long habits" founder Kate Marshall said.

Researcher award

AUSTRALIAN medical researcher Dr Ian Frazer has been awarded the Balzan Prize for his contribution to biomedical research & his role in developing a vaccine for cervical cancer.

He will receive about $800,000, half of which must be used to further his research.

Dr Frazer will address the World Vaccine Congress 2008 in Sydney on 13-15 Oct.

Locum service extended

THE Emergency Locum Service has been extended by the Pharmacy Guild, awarding the tender to the Pharmaceutical Locum Company (PLC).

The service is an initiative of the Rural Pharmacy Workforce Program, established in recognition of the key role pharmacists play in maintaining patients' health, particularly in rural and remote areas.

"The locum service is one of the ways we are increasing access to pharmacy services in rural and remote areas and strengthening and supporting the rural pharmacy workforce," Kos

Heat wins award

THE Heat Group has won Procter and Gamble Cosmetic's global distributor award for its Max Factor 'Till Ringer' point-of-sale innovation.

Heat has won the Makeup Ideas Award for six out of the past seven years, since it acquired sole distribution of P&G's cosmetic brands Covergirl and Max Factor for Australia.

"We were literally mobbed by representatives from many of the other countries in attendance, asking how they can create 'Till Ringers' for their markets," said Keith Weinberger, Heat's md.

This year's P&G conference was held in Athens, Greece, and hosted reps from 68 countries.

DISPENSARY CORNER

POLICE in Papua New Guinea have arrested a villager after he performed a number of illegal amateur circumcisions.

The East Sepik man allegedly charged 10 kina (about $5) per chop, but some surgery cock-ups leading to several painful infections led concerned parents to call the police.

"He used razor blades or a scalpel," said a police spokesman.

"No one has ever been arrested for circumcison before, so it will be a precedent," he added.

A DISGRUNTLED airline passenger has discovered a new use for foot powder.

42-year-old Arthur Nicholson was apparently upset about the flight being delayed, and pulled out a 'seven ounce container of Dr Scholl's foot powder', more often used for smelly sneakers.

He'd obviously formulated the cunning plan to strike back at the carrier during the flight, whipping out the powder when the plane landed at Boston and allegedly shouting: "This is what your airline gets for treating me bad," as he sprayed the substance through the plane.

A MUCH beloved chicken is now the first fowl in Britain to be treated with radiotherapy.

Elaine and Chris Denney spent about £1400 ($4000) to treat the three year old Sussex Buff Cross named Eve after it was afflicted by cancer in its left leg.

"We could have put her to sleep, but after a lot of soul-searching we decided to do what we could for her," said a besotted Mrs Denney.
