

TGA allergy warning

THE TGA has issued an update about the potential risks of allergic reactions associated with products containing the herbal ingredient Andrographis paniculata - also known as kalmegh, green chiretta and chuanxinlian.

The move follows a safety review of the ingredient which has been used traditionally to relieve fever, cough and cold symptoms, and gastro-intestinal upsets.

Products that include A.paniculata are currently listed on the Australian Register of Therapeutic Goods with a wide range of indications, and there are currently no restrictions or label warnings required for the use of the ingredient in medicines in Australia.

The TGA safety review looked at 43 reports of anaphylaxis and 78 reports of other allergic-type reactions associated with products that contain A.paniculata.

It concluded that the ingredient "might cause or play a contributing role in these adverse reactions, including when used in multi-ingredient formulations".

The TGA is now considering whether any further action is required and is continuing to monitor A.paniculata products.

Sanofi kids diabetes pilot

SANOFI Diabetes has announced the launch of a pilot support program for children with diabetes in Queensland.

Titled the CoSTARS Junior program it aims to help set young patients on the right path from their first diagnosis, providing tailored educational and emotional support strategies for children, parents and school staff.

A patient's paediatric endocrinologist will appoint a credentialed diabetes educator to monitor the child's progress, working to develop tailored care plans for school-aged children with type 1 and type 2 diabetes, providing knowledge around management of the condition including correct insulin injection techniques.

It's applicable to children under 18 with diabetes who have been prescribed Lantus and/or Apidra.

The program has launched in Brisbane during this week's International Society for Paediatric and Adolescent Diabetes congress, along with a new insulin delivery device for young children with diabetes called JuniorSTAR.

JuniorSTAR is a half-unit reusable insulin pen which offers greater dosing flexibility to suit the needs of young people, with improved accuracy and ease of use.

ASMI hails TCM prize

THE Australian Self-Medication Industry says the awarding of the 2015 Nobel Prize in Physiology of Medicine to Chinese researcher Youyou Tu is a "big win" for Traditional Chinese Medicine (TCM).

Tu is the first China-based scientist to win a science Nobel, and has been recognised for the development of the antimalarial drug artemisinin (qinghaosu) in the late 1960s and 1970s.

Artemisinin-based combination therapies are recommended by the World Health Organization as the first-line treatment for malaria.

Tu was the first to extract the biologically active component of the Chinese herb Artemisia annua (sweet wormwood) which led to the clinical study and eventual commercialisation of the drug.

Another Telstra buy

TELSTRA Health has announced the acquisition of WA-based EOS Technologies, a division of in-home health provider Silver Chain Group. EOS Technologies was established to develop and commercialise the desktop and smartphone-based ComCare management system used by Silver Chain nurses.

Telstra Health is also a major shareholder in pharmacy software provider Fred IT.

Epic so hot right now

EPIC Pharmacy has been announced as the principal sponsorship partner of the WBBL Brisbane Heat cricket team, which will compete this summer in the inaugural Women's Big Bash League which will run across Dec and Jan.

The move will also see Epic become the official healthcare partner of Queensland Cricket.

DISPENSARY CORNER

FANS of pop star Justin Bieber are being offered an opportunity to own some of his saliva.

The manager of a music venue in Auckland, New Zealand, is auctioning a nearly-empty bottle of Hennessy cognac which the singer was apparently chugging down during an impromptu performance last week.

Bieber landed in the city on Wednesday and that night turned up during a gig at The Studio, joining hip-hop duo Rae Sremmurd on stage as he swigged from the bottle.

According to the Dominion Post, manager Al Jepsen got his hands on the bottle afterwards, and is offering it on the TradeMe online auction website.

He claims there are probably 20-30ml left in the bottle, and estimates that 70% of it is Bieber backwash.

Described as a "must have" for any diehard fan, Jepsen says the surplus saliva is "the closest you'll probably get to a real kiss from the Bieb himself".

The auction closes this weekend, with the precious bottle having so far attracted five bids for a stunning total of NZ$30.86.

Jepsen dashed the hopes of one enquirer about whether Justin himself comes with the bottle, but said perhaps in the future DNA could be extracted from the saliva in order to create Bieber 2.0.
